The HLPR website is a forum for progressive discussion, and we invite you to take part. Our website publishes short articles that appear exclusively online as well as a complete archive of our print articles. Additionally, our blog features pieces by progressive academics, practitioners, and law students from around the country exploring legal and policy issues from new angles. Recently, we partnered with Harvard Law School's Labor and Worklife Program to publish a series of papers by practitioners and scholars on labor law reform efforts at the state and local government levels. If you are interested in blogging for HLPR, please visit our website to apply.
